FOREWORD TO THE 27th EDITION

Each new edition of THE INTERNATIONAL WHO'S WHO is the result of a complete and thorough revision of its predecessor. Not only are daily records of changes to existing entries maintained, but there is also continuous research directed towards the selection of new names for inclusion in the next edition. The fruits of this research will be apparent to all who use this latest volume and will, we believe, still further enhance the value of THE INTERNATIONAL WHO'S WHO as a source of international biographical reference.

We would once again like to express our thanks to all those who, by completing questionnaires or by correcting proofs sent to them, have enabled us to bring our information up-to-date. We would particularly like to emphasise the necessity for proofs of entries to be returned to us without delay, as only in this way can we be certain that every entry is as accurate and as up-to-date as possible.

FOREWORD TO THE FIRST EDITION
(1935)

The International Who's Who has been compiled to meet a need which has for long been noticeable to all who are brought into contact with the world of affairs. Business men, traders, bankers, politicians, journalists, writers, librarians, in every country are familiar with the existing reference books in which they can find short biographical details of the prominent figures in the life of the country. Anyone whose work leads to the handling of numbers of names of his eminent contemporaries knows by experience what an inestimable assistance it is to him to be able to find out, in a second or two, exactly "Who's Who".

But hitherto there has been a gap—an irritating, unnecessary gap—in this field of reference. Biographical reference books have been almost exclusively national. Names could be verified, addresses ascertained, past careers scrutinised, only if the subjects of the enquiry were of the same nationality as the searcher. Any attempt to have readily at hand similar information for citizens of foreign countries involved the possession of an array of different reference books. The inconvenience of this is obvious. The expense is too great for all but the tiny minority. The net result has been that biographical references for foreigners have not been available for the great majority of those who needed them.

The International Who's Who fills this need. It does not claim to include all those who find a place in the national reference books, nor does it give as many biographical details of those included as may be found elsewhere. But it does claim to include more names and more information than in any other international reference book of this kind.

The International Who's Who does not wish to supersede or to compete with the national reference books; it desires to supplement and co-ordinate them.

The compilation has necessitated both selection and compression; both are subject to the fallibility of judgment, but the compilers have attempted to include everyone whose name is known outside his own country, and to make mention of all those biographical details which are likely to be of value to foreigners. In compiling this information every attempt has been made to ensure accuracy. In the majority of cases the facts have been ascertained from the best possible source—to wit, the subject himself. In the remainder, information has been secured from authoritative sources, such as embassies, government offices, institutions, etc. Should any inaccuracies have crept in or any noteworthy names have been omitted, correction will be made in later editions, and the publishers will be grateful for any corrections or supplementary information forwarded to them by the kindness of users of the volume.

It is the wish of the compilers and publishers that the International Who's Who will have made a humble contribution to the cause of international understanding, without which permanent peace will be impossible.
